NAR TRIES TO GET USED TO THE IDEA OF BLONDE!

denial

anger

bargaining

depression

acceptance

1. Denial — "I feel fine."; "This can't be happening, not to me."
Denial is usually only a temporary defense for the individual. This feeling is generally replaced with heightened awareness of possessions and individuals that will be left behind after blondeness.

2. Anger — "Why me? It's not fair!"; "How can this happen to me?"; "Who is to blame?"
Once in the second stage, the individual recognizes that denial cannot continue. Because of anger, the person is very difficult to care for due to misplaced feelings of rage and envy.

3. Bargaining — "I'll do anything to stay a brunette."; "I will give my life savings if..."
The third stage involves postpone or delay blondeness. Usually, the negotiation for an extended life of a brunette, is made with a higher power in exchange for a reformed life-style. Psychologically, the individual is saying, "I understand I will be blonde, but if I could just do something to buy more time..."

4. Depression — "I'm so sad, why bother with anything?"; "I'm going to be blonde forever so what's the point... What's the point?"; "I miss my brown hair, why go on?"
During the fourth stage, the individual begins to understand the certainty of blondeness. Because of this, the individual may become silent, refuse visitors and spend much of the time crying and grieving. This process allows the blonde person to disconnect from things of love and affection. It is not recommended to attempt to cheer up an individual who is in this stage. It is an important time for grieving that must be processed.

5. Acceptance — "It's going to be okay."; "I can't fight it, I may as well prepare for it."
In this last stage, individuals begin to come to terms with their blondeness, or that of a loved one, or other tragic event.

MEANWHILE BACK AT THE PRESENT...
